Re: Blackstone Publishing boycott
Attachments:

In response to business practices that create barriers for library patrons, [Library Name] has chosen to boycott Blackstone Publishing's eAudiobooks for six months, beginning Aug. 1, 2019 and ending Jan. 31, 2020.

[Library Name] offers eBooks and eAudiobooks through the vendor platform OverDrive. [Library Name] card holders may recognize this service under the names OverDrive or Libby.

Beginning July 1, 2019, Blackstone Publishing enacted an embargo, prohibiting public libraries from purchasing eAudiobook copies of selected new titles for 90 days after their release. This means that public libraries are not allowed to buy eAudiobooks from Blackstone even though copies are available for individuals to purchase through regular retail sites.

As a public library, [Library Name] has an ethical obligation to ensure that library patrons have access to a broad range of material. As public servants, librarians are obliged to spend library funds effectively and responsibly. Any publisher or vendor that creates a barrier between library patrons and information access impinges on a library's ability to use local tax dollars responsibly.

For these reasons, [Library Name] has chosen to boycott Blackstone Audio's eAudiobooks for the period described. During this time, no new Blackstone eAudiobooks will be added to the digital collection. [Here we suggest adding a quote from the library director in support of the boycott.]

[Library Name] will continue to purchase Blackstone products in other formats, such as Audio CDs, that are not impacted by Blackstone's implemented embargo. It will continue to add new eAudiobook content to the digital collection, choosing an equal number of new books from other publishers. Previously-published Blackstone eAudiobooks already in the digital collection will not be affected.
